101 Essential Tips, Tricks and Hacks

I just finished reading through "The PHP Anthology - 101 Essential Tips, Tricks & Hacks, 2nd Edition - Free 207 Page EBook!". This is a great resource for anyone with a website.

Let me take a moment to provide a little background for those who are not familiar with PHP. It is a widely-used general-purpose scripting language that is especially suited for web development and can be embedded into HTML. It generally runs on a web server, taking PHP code as its input and creating web pages as output. It can be deployed on most web servers and on almost every operating system and platform free of charge.

Today PHP is installed on more than 20 million websites and 1 million web servers.

If you work with PHP this 207 page ebook contains a collection of the best solutions for common PHP questions. For example:

- How to use HTTP authentication.
- What are sessions and how do you use them?
- Tips on how to eliminate the problem of SQL injection attacks.
- How to examine HTTP headers in browsers.

The ready-to-use solutions to questions like these and many more within the pages of The PHP Anthology are sure to save you time, and eliminate some of the frustrations of successfully completing PHP tasks. If you are building web applications with PHP you will never let this book out of your sight!

Every corner of your online presence is a money-making opportunity with RevResponse – even your site registration landing page can become a potential revenue generator.

If you operate a site that requires visitors to sign-up for your newsletter, for other offers, for alerts, etc., you can maximize that action. When a visitor registers within your site, you most likely send them to a “thank you” page or send them a confirmation email where you give membership information for signing up.

Capitalize on that captive audience by including a message with an offer promotion. For example: “Thank you for registering/signing up. As part of your membership with us, we’d like to offer you the following free magazine subscription (or download).”

Marketing itself as a viable AdSense alternative, RevResponse is not a CPC-based ad network. Instead, it grants publishers the opportunity to supply their site visitors with free business-related resources and each qualifying registration results in a set-rate commission for the publisher. In this way, RevResponse works on the CPA (cost-per-action) model of advertising.

Perhaps the most attractive aspect of RevResponse is that they guarantee a payout of $1.50 for each qualifying signup, subscription, or registration. At the same time, they mention that most advertisers offer more than this bare minimum amount and some are said to pay publishers $20 or more for each qualifying lead.

Features

There are many different business-related resources available through RevResponse and the key is that they are all free. When a visitor signs up for any of these services or downloads any of these resources, the publisher gets paid. The resources range from podcasts and white papers to real magazine subscriptions. Bear in mind that these resources are very much business-related, so publishers will not have the opportunity to give away copies of Cosmopolitan, GamePro, or Reader's Digest. They will have access to Profit Magazine, Website Magazine, and Aviation Maintenance, for example.

The magazines and downloads are broken down into about 30 different industries. This offers a fair bit of versatility, especially given the range of industries represented by RevResponse. Some examples include: agriculture, automotive, computers, education, finance, government, human resources, information technology, multimedia, retail, telecom, and transportation.

The different advertising formats, which are discussed in greater detail below, are reasonably versatile as well. In addition to the usual assortment of banner ads, RevResponse also offers pre-written promotional paragraphs, text links, and a unique Flash widget. Select publishers are also provided with a co-branded website filled with affiliate links.
